

12 Hot Tub Winterizing Tips

These may or may not apply to your hot tub or user style, but there's probably one here that could save you a buck or two a month.

Read on and learn how to save energy on your hot tub in the winter.

1. Program your filter/heat cycles to run at night if you have a "night-rate" meter.

- 2. Leave all air controls/valves OFF, as you don't want to pull in outside air to push through your jets when the tub is not being used.
- 3. Consult your owner's manual to see if your controls have a "economy" or "standby" mode, leaving your tub 10-15 degrees cooler than your set temp.
- 4. Use a thermal blanket or "solar cover" to keep evaporation down under your spa cover.
- 5. Break down and buy that new cover! It may cost now, but will save you energy and ease-of-use in the long run. I talk w/ a lot of people who are too "lazy" to go 'tubbin because their cover is such a pain to deal with!!
- 6. Portable spa owners will benefit from a layer of foam board insulation under theirs, as they are typically not well insulated on the floor.
- 7. Obstruct prevailing winds with a privacy panel or fence...this sometimes can lead to BIG energy savings.

- 8. Take a peek inside your spa cabinet...can you add some insulation? I recommend foil-faced bubble-wrap, available at most home improvement stores. It's waterproof, cuts w/ scissors, staples/stuffs in and is R3 per 1/4" !! (the 'double-bubble' is best).
- 9. Keep tub out from under drip edges, as water and ice falling on cover/cabinet will drop temps more than normal.
- 10. Closely inspect bottom and top perimeter of your cabinet. Are there any voids where heat is sneaking out, and mice in??
- 11. This is a tough one, but positioning your tub on a South-facing exposure, or in a sun-exposed corner does wonders for melting snow/ice, and keeping temps up on the spa cover vinyl.
- 12. Lastly, be sure to use your spa on the coldest nights when you have a chill...that's why you spent all that money, right??
